On the next floor the front and back parlors: on the next, living room and study; next, two bedrooms, a play room and sewing room, and on the tap floor, Judge Nott's eldest daughter's bedroom and the caretaker's rooms.

There was a crowd of police and other officials in front of the Nott house during the day, supervising the work of clearing up the debria. Inspector Eagan had direct charge of this work. He was anxious that no fragment of the bomb which would give a clue to its manufacture should be lost. One of the first objects his men discovered was Boehner's scalp, tora from his head. Others in the police lines were Deputy Commissioner A. D.

Detectives in first Street, however, said they saw no one in the block immediately after the crash.

The scanes that followed the explosion probably were unique in New York's history of infinite variety. Scores of partly dressed residents rushed to the street. The asphalt gilt-tered for many blocks with fragments of glass. Everywhere windows hid been blown out. Inside scores of houses crockery, bric-a-bran, and plastering were shattered.

One freak was found in the Nott home. A big mirror in the lower hall near the big clock, which had been stopped by the shock, was undamaged, though everything around it was broken or disloged.

The Nott stoop of ten steps, its iron rails, the platform and iron grill gate were blown downward and inward. For a quarter of a mile in every direction buildings rocked and shook and sent their occupants securitying to the streets. pected of being concerned in explosions last night at the homes of Judge for the purpose and were experts in the handling of explosives. Albert F. Hayden in the Roxbury district in this city, and State Repreto-day. One was released after an examination but the other was held pending further investigation. In the home of the latter the police found a quantity of foreign printed literature which was immediately turned over to translators.

Meanwhile, extra guards were placed about the court houses, the State House, City Hall and other public buildings and a thorough search of all these buildings was made for hidden explosives.

After visiting the Powers home in Newton, State Chemist Wedger expressed the opinion that the blast was caused by the explosion of a quantity of dynamite set off by a fuse. In the case of the explosion at the Hayden home, pieces of shrapnel were found indicating the use of a bomb but in a thorough search of the Newton house Mr. Wedger was unable to find any such particles.

With the exception of a son, Malcolm Hayden, all the members of Judge Hayden's family were at their summer residence in Plymouth. The son was just returning to the Roxbury residence and was but a few hundred feet down the street when the explosion occurred.

Judge Hayden, after viewing the premises a few hours later declared that had he and his family been in the house some of them must surely have been killed. His own bed chamber and that of his daughter Barbara were wrecked as well as other portions of the house.

Windows of houses in the immediate vicinity were shattered by the force of the explosion, which alarmed the entire Roxbury district.

Judge Hayden expressed the opinion that the attack on his home was made because of his attitude in the cases of nearly a hundred May Day rioters who recently appeared in his court and upon many of whom he mposed heavy sentences.

"But it doesn't intimidate me in the slightest," he said. "If they expected this would frighten me, they are mistaken. It was the most cowardly thing one could imagine."

The only occasion that could be ascribed for the attempt to blow up the Powers home was the legislative activity of Representative Powers on Anti-Anarchy bill, recently adopted, although friends pointed out moderation in its construction. Mr. Powers, his two children and two maids were in the house at the time.

Examination of the Powers home in Newtonville by daylight showed extensive damages. The explosive, the police said, apparently had been placed against the outside wall and probably saved the lives of members

HIS is not the first time that announcements have been made through the New York press that the LOFT candy stores have passed from the control of the LOFT family. This business is still under that control, just as it has been for the past fifty years, and I personally, know customers of ours who have been patrons of the LOFT stores from childhood, who fully realize that the same old standards prevail as regards QUALITY and CLEANLINESS in the manufacture and distribution of LOFT candy. I also wish to say that, with the exception of the stock held by our employees, which was purchased a few years ago, when they were given the privilege of becoming partners, the members of the LOFT family still own this concern. MORE AND BETTER CANDY is our slo-
